Course Description

In this course, we will learn about some of the world’s belief systems, including Judaism, Christianity, Islam, Baha’i, Hinduism, Buddhism and atheism.

Religion plays a major role in our society, influencing political elections, public policy, world affairs, education and culture. All journalists should have a working knowledge of the world’s major faiths. In this course, you will develop that knowledge by reading religion scholar Stephen Prothero’s book “God Is Not One” and selections from other writers as well hearing from guest speakers and watching videos. You’ll assess mainstream media coverage of these traditions, looking at accuracy and fairness. You will also try your hand at religion writing by visiting houses of worship and interviewing faith leaders and lay people. You should come away from this course with a better grasp of some of the world’s religions, how the media handle faith and what makes religion news.

Required Texts
Both books are available at the UT Co-op, online or at booksellers around town. “God Is Not One” by Stephen Prothero; “Persepolis” by Marjane Satrapi; other readings to be emailed

Because all news stories must adhere to the Associated Press style guidelines, you should either purchase the latest edition of the AP Stylebook or have access to one.

Assignments
Assignments are posted on Canvas with due dates and times. Late assignments will be docked points. Contact me if you are unable to turn in your work because of illness, family emergency, etc.

Stories/Field Work – You will write a timely news or feature story on three of the major religions we study. The readings and class discussions are designed to prepare you to choose a topic and write with a basic understanding of each faith. You must have two live sources for each story. In-person or phone interviews are preferred. Email interviews are OK but not ideal. Web sources do NOT count as live sources but may be used for background and context. Family and close friends do NOT count as sources. If you are unsure about a conflict of interest, ask me.

Each story should be at least 500 words and must include the information from sources used (name, title, contact info). AP style is required, and each story must have a nut graph and follow basic grammar and punctuation rules. Tip: Read a newspaper daily to see how reporters craft their stories.

Extra Credit Opportunity: You will have the option to write a fourth news/feature story on one of the following topics: Hinduism, Buddhism, Baha’i faith or atheism. If you would like to make up for a poor grade on a previous assignment or just want more reporting experience, this is your chance to boost your overall grade. See me individually for more details.

Reading Response Papers – The purpose of these readings is to gain a framework for each religion before you report on it. Papers need not be more than two pages but must show serious reflection and cite 2-3 specific examples from each assigned reading. This is your opportunity to articulate your thoughts on the readings, ask questions and explore your personal reactions. Don’t be afraid to say if you disagree with the writer. I want you to look critically at the writers’ biases (and your own biases). Don’t hold back. Just show me that you’re learning something.

Media Coverage Examples – Find an example of mainstream news coverage of the religion we’re discussing. Be prepared to defend or attack the piece you choose in class. Is the story accurate, fair, balanced? Is the headline appropriate? Examples
Final Project – There is some flexibility with this assignment in terms of the topic and medium. Options include but are not limited to a 1,000-word feature story, a short video, a podcast and a photo slide show. You must turn in a formal proposal for your project by Nov. 17. You must have at least 3 live sources, and you may not use friends or institutions with whom/which you are personally involved. I encourage students to meet with me outside of class to discuss their project ideas.

Attendance/Participation – Attendance is mandatory, and tardiness will result in deduction of attendance points. In the case of illness, family emergency, etc., please notify me ASAP to ensure you are not penalized for missing class. Participation is essential. Come to class prepared to contribute. This is especially important when we have guest speakers. You must prepare questions for speakers the way a journalist would for a press conference.

Ground Rules
Please do not use laptops, cell phones, tablets, etc. during class. I want to foster old-fashioned discussion without distractions. If you want to look something up that’s relevant to our discussion, please ask. Also, I’m open to bending this rule if, for example, you want to live tweet a guest speaker’s presentation. We will discuss this as semester progresses.

Good email etiquette is essential in the professional world. Practice it now. Confirm receipt of one-on-one email messages. Say thank you when someone helps you. If you email me and don't hear back, do not assume I received your message. When in doubt, call or text me.

Be respectful to your fellow classmates. Religion is a delicate topic. I encourage you to be open and honest about your biases, questions, feelings about every faith we cover. But we must also show sensitivity. If you ever feel I have been insensitive to your beliefs, please let me know.
